Marriage and relationship issues

Legal help can ease the pain and uncertainty

Is your marriage in difficulty?

If you are breaking up, there are some major areas of uncertainty, and you need to know where you stand. What happens to the children, home, bills, savings, possessions? How long will things take to resolve, and how much will it cost?

These are all areas in which you need specialist lawyers who can offer expert help, and will do so sympathetically.

Let Andrew & Andrew help

The first thing we offer is a free assessment, advising you of the costs to continue.

Our aim is to advise you on all court procedures and to tell you where you stand in the eyes of the law. However, we will try our best to avoid court proceedings in the interests of costs, stress and stability, especially for any children involved. To do this we will negotiate and mediate, aiming for a settlement which both parties can agree to.

We can help answer your questions

Where will you and the children live once you have separated?

How much can your partner pay to support you and the children?

What can be done to keep the children safe when they see your partner?

How long will it take to sort out the family finance and arrangements for the children?

Other services

Living arrangements

Did you know that at Andrew & Andrew we can also help you with pre-nuptial and living together agreements, and Civil Partnerships.

Your will

Once your separation has been agreed, we can help you update your will to nominate a guardian for your children, and to ensure your ex-partner will not benefit financially upon your death.
